| 5-8 pm | Alaska Peace Center Potluck & Presentation: VietNam 50 yrs later: Impressions of the People and Reflections on the War & its Legacies. Vietnam is full of vibrant energetic people pulling themselves out of poverty caused in large part by a century of colonization by the French; decades of war with the French, Japanese, French again, Americans, Cambodians and Chinese; and 2 decades of economic isolation by America & its allies. They are happy, pragmatic people with a strong sense of history and a rich literary tradition, who are simultaneously looking toward the future. Alan has just returned from 5 weeks in Viet Nam where he was part of the Veterans For Peace delegation to the 50th anniversary commemoration of the My Lai Massacre on March 16. He will report on that commemoration and also provide an update on the two main legacy issues remaining from the war: unexploded ordnance and agent orange dioxin contamination. These are heavy issues, but the overall attitude to them in Viet Nam is one of optimism and moving beyond them to a peaceful and productive future. Alan probably won't be able to stop himself from also commenting on other aspects of his trip unrelated to wars and violence. For more information call Veteran For Peace Alan Batten: 488-3205 |

Decolonizing Alaska is a multimedia visual art exhibit featuring contemporary artists exploring and responding to Alaska's history of colonization. A collaboration of more than 30 diverse Alaska artists, both Native and non-Native, the exhibit introduces new ideas around Alaska culture. Artists move beyond stereotypical ideas to inspire conversation around self-definition and express ideas about identity separate from those that permeate popular culture. Learn more about the exhibit.

What is being done in our name in Syria?

“No Chemical Attack in Douma, Two International Investigative Reporters in Douma Write,” article by Col. Ann Wright.

And about the (in)accuracy of reporting on the US airstrikes in retribution for the claimed chemical attacks, read “About those ‘Nice, New, Smart’ Missiles and the ‘Chemical Weapons’ Sites in Syria,” by Joe Quinn in Global Research, which includes a brief history of ‘intercept’ reports.

“After 100 cruise missiles or...variants were fired at targets in Syria early in the morning of April 14th... An important point that seems to have gotten lost in the media propaganda offensive is that only 3 locations were targeted and hit. “ ‘Blowing up suspected chemical weapons production and storage facilities located in densely populated areas amounts to reckless endangerment of the local population, and possibly a war crime,” and, “Syria Airstrikes Instantly Added Nearly $5 Billion to Missile-Makers’ Stock Value” from Friends Committee on National Legislation: “The House Agriculture Committee just passed a farm bill that could force a million people off the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP, formerly food stamps). SNAP helps more than 40 million people put food on the table and prevent hunger. Will you contact Rep. Don Young today & urge him to oppose House farm bill HR 22?

This] bill makes existing work requirements for SNAP even harsher. Individuals would have just a month to find a job or enter a qualified job training program before they lose SNAP benefits. And every month they must prove they are working the required amount. Work is important, but SNAP is not a jobs program. It is an anti-hunger program, and it is extremely effective. [To get more people into the workforce, raise wages, & create jobs, [Congress] should... invest in existing workforce programs, [which it] has been cutting for years. from Alaska Community Action on Toxics: “More than 50 families across the country have lost loved ones to the deadly chemical methylene chloride. Drew Wymee died stripping paint from a floor at his small business using a product he purchased at Lowe’s. Kevin Hartley died after stripping a bathtub for his family’s contracting business. The list goes on and on. But Lowe’s has refused to take paint strippers containing methylene chloride off store shelves. Lowe’s has also refused to stop selling paint strippers containing another toxic chemical called N-Methylpyrrolidone (NMP). This chemical can impact fetal development and can even cause miscarriage or stillbirth from just one day of exposure. The Mind the Store campaign has sent Lowe’s letters asking them to stop selling these products. Advocates have met with their staff. And more than 100,000 consumers like you have signed the petition to Lowe’s. Yet, they still sell these harmful products. Will you take a minute to call Lowe’s customer service to tell them to stop selling deadly paint strippers? Here’s how: 1. Call Lowe’s customer service at (800) 445-6937 then press 4 then 1 to provide feedback to a representative. 2. You can use these talking points (or if you want to learn more first, check out these fact sheets on methylene chloride and NMP). Please feel free to put it in your own words.

Reasons. Inadequate public debate & accountability. “Former Marine and author Phil kay [says] the lack of clear mission, and the lack of debate about the fighting in American society, are having deleterious effects on troop morale.” NPR/KUAC 4/19/18

“US easing rules on sales of armed drones, other weaponry - The Trump administration moved Thursday to make it easier for U.S. defense contractors to sell armed drones and other conventional weapons to foreign governments.

In policy changes aimed at boosting American firms' ability to compete in the increasingly lucrative global arms market, the administration said it is removing restrictions that barred U.S. manufacturers from directly marketing and selling drones, including those that are armed or can be used to guide missile strikes, abroad. Previously, foreign countries had to go through the U.S. government to buy such drones. They will now be able to deal directly with the companies, although the government will retain oversight.

Despite Thursday's changes, the government must still approve the sales by overcoming a presumption of denial contingent on human rights and proliferation considerations. Sales will also remain subject to congressional review...

In addition, the revisions will add U.S. economic interests as a primary consideration in broader arms export control reviews...” nytimes.com 4/19

On 20 April 1914, US troops opened fire with machine guns on a camp of striking miners and their families in Ludlow, Colorado. The National Guard officer in charge also murdered the striker sent to arrange a truce with him. The militiamen entered the camp late in the evening and set fire to the tents, killing two women and 11 children, in addition to around 13 others who were shot dead. No soldiers were prosecuted over the killings. This is the history of the massacre: https://nbcnews历史/articles/ludlow-massacre-1914

4/19 NPR News: 130Million Americans breathing unhealthy air. Fbks/N.Pole has worst air quality in the nation. kuac.
The 2001 Authorization for the Use of Military Force has provided three presidents with a blank check for expanding war. Although this new authorization repeals the 2001 AUMF, the new legislation fails to include a firm sunset and can only be stopped by another vote from Congress.

from Friends Committee on National Legislation: “...Instead of constraining the executive branch, this new sweeping AUMF explicitly authorizes all current military operations under the 2001 AUMF and paves the way for an ever-expanding war. Since its passage in 2001, three administrations have collectively cited the 2001 AUMF as the legal justification for 41 military actions across 18 different countries- and these are only the uses that exist in the public record. While the 2018 AUMF would repeal the 2001 and 2002 AUMFs, it perpetuates the same deep flaws found in the originals... See what principles FCNL believes must be in any new AUMF.
