fromfcac: "Call for Climate Action in the FNSB Economic Recovery Plan - The borough's economic development commission is rapidly developing an economic recovery plan to respond to the current economic crisis caused by COVID-19. We need to make sure that climate change action is integrated in and not just disregarded! You can provide comment by emailing EDC@fnsb.us. You might encourage them to:

- help small businesses transition to clean energy,
- help low-income homeowners weatherize (reduces their carbon footprint),
- help farmers increase our food security by helping them market their products, or
- invest in energy efficiency (and solarize) all borough buildings. ...or any other great ideas you have!"

from Sen. Bernie Sanders: "Unlike privatized delivery services, the Postal Service is required by law to deliver all mail and packages to everyone nationwide, regardless of where they live. And each year it is responsible for delivering 1.2 billion packages of medicine to those who need it... It is an outrage that Trump recently blocked an agreement to save the Postal Service. If Trump had it his way, he would allow it to go bankrupt and then privatize it, jeopardizing more than 600,000 decent paying jobs. How will people get their prescription drugs and, once they become available, their coronavirus test kits? How will we allow people to vote by mail in an election that is facing unprecedented hurdles to getting voters out to the polls? How will these things be possible if we do not have a fully functioning Postal Service? Add your name if you agree that Congress must act now to save the United States Postal Service and protect its workers."

"Army Reserve recruiters told to utilize 'this terrible event in our favor' to recruit more soldiers amid COVID-19 spread - 'We need to be just selling and closing the deal over the phone and utilizing this terrible event in our favor as to why one should want to remain or return to the [U.S. Army Reserve] for the supplemental income and insurance.'" quotes a March 24, 2020, article in Task & Purpose.

from Smart Justice Alaska 4-20-20: "Alaska doesn't have the death penalty, so going to prison shouldn't be a death sentence. But during COVID-19, public health experts warn that the global pandemic could take a devastating toll on the correctional system... Alaska's prison population is aging and vulnerable, and disproportionately houses Alaska Native prisoners. And... COVID-19 comes at a time when Alaska's jails and prisons are dangerously overcrowded and understaffed. That's why we're calling on Governor Michael J. Dunleavy, DOC Commissioner Nancy Dahlstrom, Alaska State Troopers, and local law enforcement entities across the state to follow the guidance of experts, and urgently take actions that reduce the risk of spread of COVID-19. TAKE ACTION."

from winwithoutwar: "Trump has consistently used the global coronavirus pandemic as cover for outrageous and dangerous foreign policy decisions. In fact, since COVID-19, the threat of war and abuse of U.S. foreign policy by the Trump administration has not slowed one bit: Trump has refused to drop sanctions on Iran that denies life-saving medical equipment and basic supplies to help stop the spread of COVID-19. He’s halted funding to the World Health Organization (WHO). He has positioned forces within striking distance of Venezuela and Iran. And he’s been ordering unprecedented airstrikes on Somalia...

"Just this week Trump, by tweet, instructed the U.S. Navy to fire on Iranian fast boats — a dramatic escalation for a form of harassment by the Iranian armed forces that has been a regular occurrence without major incident for decades. Meanwhile in Somalia, with the journalists understandably focusing elsewhere, the United States has conducted more airstrikes in four months, than it did during all of Barack Obama’s eight years in office... We can't afford to let up pressure..."
“Trump is halting funding to the World Health Organization (WHO) in the middle of a global pandemic. Add your name to call on Congress NOW to safeguard WHO funding!

"January 31, 2020, the Trump administration announced the United States would end existing prohibitions against the use of landmines — with little explanation and contrary to expert opinion. We deserve answers. Nearly 60 members of Congress have already signed Sen Leahy and Rep McGovern’s letter questioning the rationale and implications of this decision. Will you urge Rep. Young and Sens. Murkowski and Sullivan to add their names? " from CodePink: "BlackRock, the world’s largest investor in weapons and oil companies, has been tapped by the U.S. Federal Reserve to help resuscitate the U.S. economy during the global pandemic. BlackRock promotes a roughly 3 billion-dollar defense fund locked and loaded full of weapons made by Lockheed Martin, General Dynamics, Raytheon, Northrop Grumman, and Boeing defense. All these companies make a killing on killing... Instead of the U.S. government granting BlackRock a seat at the bailout table, a long-term plan needs to be crafted to build a green and peaceful economy. Average Americans are struggling and speaking out about how the government is choosing “money over morality... Tell the Fed Chair Jerome Powell: Don’t let BlackRock use taxpayer dollars to bailout weapon and oil companies!"

from About Face: Veterans Against the War: "Response to COVID-19 and What We Can Do About It -[See explanations at this link]

We need to begin by tackling these six areas of political need and opportunity in the time of coronavirus:

1. We need to engage in and spread the practice of community-based defense instead of militarized security.
2. We need to draw careful lines between what is acceptable military response and what is categorically unacceptable.
3. We need to put coronavirus in context with the Global War on Terror (GWoT) and domestic militarism.
4. We need to resist and reject Coronavirus Capitalism.
5. We need to demand that the Department of Defense adequately protect Active, Guard, & Reserve military personnel from contracting coronavirus.*
6. We need to act in solidarity with indigenous and international communities.

For a bit of fun: “From a (Social) Distance" Song Parody by Emma's Revolution

audio & music played with this week's broadcast:

-- "Hello this is The Asymmetric Moose, Rob Mulford with picks of the week of April 26, 2020.

This coming Friday, May First, 2020, will be the 134th anniversary of the events that birthed International Workers Day, a holiday and a movement all rolled up in one. Maybe the movement side of this holiday is the reason that, although it is celebrated in at least 80 countries worldwide, from Argentina to Vietnam, it is not celebrated in the United States. Most U.S. workers, most people in the U.S. do not even understand its significance, despite the fact that events that gave the observance rise, took place on the streets of Chicago, right here in Land of the Free, on May 1 through May 4, 1886. The amnesia is not without cause; “Labor Day” was carefully put into September – by President Grover Cleveland in 1894 – specifically so that we would not observe May Day, with all of its radical roots in syndicalist labor history.

On Saturday, May 1, 1886, a nationwide general strike in support of the eight hour day was observed. In Chicago alone, 60,000 workers walked off their jobs. In a truly prescient headline, a Chicago labor newspaper that day announced: “The Dies Are Cast! The First of May, Whose Historical Significance Will Be Understood and Appreciated Only in Later Years, Is Here!” The general strike for the eight-hour day continued on Monday, May 3. On the afternoon of May 3, August Spies was addressing a rally of striking workers that had been locked out of the McCormick Reaper Works in Chicago, when hundreds of police officers simply began shooting into the crowd of workers. Several workers died, and many others were wounded. That night, Parsons, Spies, and other anarchists printed leaflets calling for a labor rally the next afternoon in Haymarket Square to protest the massacre of unarmed strikers by police at the McCormick plant.

The labor demonstration in Haymarket Square in the afternoon of Tuesday, May 4, 1886, was peaceful until the very end. Parsons spoke to the group and then left the rally to meet his family at a nearby labor hall. Spies spoke at the rally, urging peaceful action to protest the massacre of the previous day and to support the cause of the eight-hour day. Chicago Mayor Carter Harrison attended and reported to the police that the demonstration was “tame” (Harrison’s word) and peaceful. But near the end of the rally, an unknown person threw a bomb into the phalanx of police officers attending the rally. In response, the police officers attacked the unarmed laborers. Hundreds of police officers fired into the terrified, fleeing crowd. An unknown number of people were killed and many others were wounded. Many police officers were wounded, some seriously, by gunfire. Every such wounded police officer – every one! – had been shot by other police officers. In the bloody police riot that followed the bombing, police officers shot wildly and at random; labor protesters and police officers alike were shot down.

In the days after the riot, eight local Chicago anarchists were indicted and arrested: Parsons, Spies, Michael Schwab, Samuel Fielden, Louis Lingg, George Engel, Adolph Fischer, and Oscar Neebe. The indictment acknowledged that the bomb had been “thrown by an unknown person” but alleged that the unknown bombthrower had been “aided abetted, and encouraged” the indicted anarchists. In the aftermath of the indictments of the eight anarchists, a kind of brutal martial law was imposed on Chicago. Anarchist and labor meeting halls were closed down. Hundreds of suspects were rounded up, interrogated, and held by police without charges being brought. Mayor Harrison closed down Chicago’s leading labor newspaper and banned public meetings – all by ukase. Mainstream newspapers blamed the eighthour movement for the bombing and ensuing bloodshed, and in the Red Scare that followed, the eight-hour movement fizzled for a time. In fact, the eight-hour work day did not become law in the United States until the enactment of the Fair Labor Standards Act in 1938.

All eight of the defendants were tried and convicted. Seven were sentenced to death. Fielden and Schwab later had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment. Lingg died on the eve of his scheduled execution, probably assassinated by the police, although some accounts say that Lingg died by his own hand. Neebe was sentenced to 15 years. Parsons, Spies, Fischer and Engel were hanged. In a final gesture of retribution, the ropes used to kill the prisoners were made too short, so that instead of dying instantly when the trap doors opened on the gallows, each prisoner was made to suffocate to death slowly and excruciatingly. American justice.

Through these times of struggle with Covid 19 may we not loose sight of those who have struggled before us; putting their lives on the line for those precious things many of us take for granted, like the 8 hour day. May we too take up the mantle of human rights and dignity; commit ourselves to the same struggle; for if we don’t there are those with power who would happily reverse what little progress has been made to date.

Paul Robeson understood the struggle and carried it on throughout his career. In 1949 he sang the following tune to a group of Scottish coal miners, about another labor activist hero who met his untimely end by firing squad, Joe Hill.

Florence Reece also knew struggle. She knew it in pains of hunger she saw in the children’s faces. She write the next tune on the back of a calendar after gun thugs came to her home, looking to take her husband away. Which Side Are You On.

The struggle continues today. Sweet honey and the rock sing about in More Than A Paycheck."
