Similar provisions were incorporated into the Charter of the United Nations and other treaties... "We are working to get the word out about the nuclear warhead factory being constructed at Los Alamos. We are demanding an environmental impact study because we absolutely must have information about what this means for each of us. Based on what we know, Los Alamos is about to become a bomb factory. Accordingly, everyone in the area will be impacted by this. from Co-op Market & Grocery: "Calling all Co-op Market Owners! We need your voice on our board of directors. Cooperative Principle #2 is Democratic Member Control, and our co-op is governed by a seven-person board of directors. Board members are Owners and are elected by their fellow Owners. This year, we have three seats with three-year terms up for election."
our representative... and tell each of them to call for a Site-Wide Environmental Impact Statement, or SWEIS.

"Here’s the talking point:
"I am concerned about the new nuclear warhead factory at Los Alamos, which is being built without an environmental impact study. The potential impacts of the factory and the resulting radioactive waste on our environment and our livelihoods is not known. New Mexicans deserve to know how we will be impacted by this. We demand an environmental impact study. We are calling on you to require a site-wide environmental impact statement to be completed before the project proceeds."

"More details:
Millions of dollars have already been flowing into Los Alamos National Laboratories (LANL) for the construction of the plutonium "pit" factory. The pit is the radioactive core of the nuclear warhead - the part that causes mass destruction. The NNSA expects the factory to produce 30 pits per year by 2026, and 80 to 100 pits per year by 2030. Each one will have the destructive force of 15 Hiroshima-sized bombs.

"...Nuclear weapons production creates toxic radioactive waste. But there is no clear plan for how all this toxic waste will be stored or disposed of...

"And did you know Los Alamos sits right in the middle of a seismically active fault zone? There was a 3.7 magnitude earthquake near Los Alamos recently -- on July 30. According to the US Geological Survey, a major earthquake (magnitude 6.3 to 7) is possible at any time.

"Congress appropriated our taxpayer dollars for NNSA to build this nuclear warhead factory despite the macabre absurdity of building more nuclear weapons when the US already has 3,800 of them at the ready – that’s your place of worship. We’ll provide a digital download for your online event, you provide the friends. Then mask up or mail in! Go to www.fighttovote.org now to get started." from @RobertGreenwald, Brave New Films
