"Urgent Action Needed TODAY - Send your Letters to Senators Sullivan & Murkowski
Four years ago, Sen. Sullivan spoke against President Obama’s nomination of Judge Merrick Garland: “The decision to withhold advancement of Mr. Garland’s nomination isn’t about the individual, it’s about the principle. Alaskans, like all Americans, are in the midst of an important national election. The next Supreme Court justice could fundamentally change the direction of the Court for years to come. Alaskans deserve to have a voice in that direction through their vote, and we will ensure that they have one.”

from Northern Alaska Environmental Center:
"Together we can clean up our Fairbanks air
Current modeling shows that Fairbanks PM2.5 pollution can be cut in half by 2024 if we all continue to make good choices when it comes to burning wood. We need to continue to avoid burning on bad air days and seriously consider switching from No. 2 to No. 1 heating fuel.

"The State’s Serious SIP (State Implementation Plan) is again open for comment with a single proposed change: if PM2.5 levels are not headed in the right direction, the new proposed contingency measure lowers the threshold for burn bans from 30 to 25 micrograms of PM2.5 per cubic meter.”

"Alaska Department of Fish and Game and The Conservation Fund announced that 530 acres has been acquired for anticipated addition to the Creamer’s Field Migratory Waterfowl State Game Refuge in Fairbanks, Alaska. As part of the State Refuge System, the property provides wetland habitat for waterfowl and wildlife, and access to the public for recreational hunting, birdwatching, skiing and dog mushing.”

from Our Children’s Trust: "After a hotly contested nearly decade-long battle, the Oregon Supreme Court today ruled against Ollie Cherniak and Kelsey Juliana, youth plaintiffs in Cherniak v. Brown. Writing in a powerful dissent, Chief Justice Martha Walters of the Oregon Supreme Court recognized the “ravages of climate change” and affirmed “the judicial branch has an important constitutional role to play and should declare the governing law.”

mistake if they fail to sign and provide an identifier on their envelope?
No... An Anchorage Superior Court judge recently rejected a request that the state quickly notify voters if they fail to sign or provide identifying information on their mailed ballots, saying that wouldn’t follow state law.

"Voters will be notified if their absentee ballot was rejected within 60 days of the certification of elections results. Since the target for certifying the results is Nov. 25, this will be in late January.

"What’s the deadline for mailing an absentee ballot? The envelope must be postmarked by Election Day, Nov. 3. Voters can ask at their post office for their envelopes to be postmarked in person. If they don’t do this, the U.S. Postal Service sends mail across Alaska to Anchorage to be postmarked. So on Election Day, or the day before it, voters should ask a postal clerk to postmark the envelope."

Audio & Songs broadcast with this week’s Community News:

"Moose Picks ... Hello this is Rob Mulford, the Asymmetric Moose, with picks for the week of October 11, 2020:

That was Solomon Burke singing None Of Us Are Free

Since the George W. Bush administration launched its so-called “global war on terror”, a designation in-itself that is a gross deception dressed in jingoistic propaganda, following Al Qaeda’s September 11, 2001 attacks on the United States, the U.S. military has waged war continuously for almost two decades. In that time, U.S. forces have fought in wars or participated in other combat operations in at least 24 countries. The destruction inflicted by warfare in these countries has been incalculable for civilians and combatants, for U.S. military personnel and their family members, and for entire societies. Deaths and injuries number in the millions. Like other wars throughout history, the U.S. post-9/11 wars have caused millions of people—the vast majority, civilians—to fear for their lives and flee in search of safety. Millions have fled air strikes, bombings, artillery fire, drone attacks, gun battles, and rape. People have fled the destruction of their homes, neighborhoods, hospitals, schools, jobs, and local food and water sources. They have escaped forced evictions, death threats, and large-scale ethnic cleansing set off by the U.S wars in Afghanistan and Iraq in particular.

A report released by Brown University’s Watson Institute of International Affairs titled “Creating Refugees: Displacement Caused by the United States’ Post-9/11 Wars” exposes truths that should be a cornerstones to any critical thought on the subject of US international relations. Some of the reports major findings include:

Post-9/11 U.S. wars have forcibly displaced at least 37 million people in and from Afghanistan (5.3Million), Iraq (9.2Million), Pakistan (3.7Million), Yemen (4.4Million), Somalia (4.2Million), the Philippines (1.7Million), Libya (1.2Million), and Syria (7.1 Million).

This total exceeds those displaced by every war since 1900, except World War II. Thirty seven million is a very conservative estimate. The total displaced by the U.S. post-9/11 wars could be closer to 48–59 million.

Although twenty-five point 3 million people have returned after being displaced, their return does not erase the trauma of displacement or mean that those displaced have returned to their original homes or to a secure life.

Any number is limited in what it can convey about displacement’s damage. The people behind the numbers can be difficult to see, and numbers cannot communicate how it might feel to lose one’s home, belongings, community, and much more.

Displacement has caused incalculable harm to individuals, families, towns, cities, regions, and entire countries physically, socially, emotionally, and economically.
We, as citizens of the United States of America, by failing to take the findings of this report into serious behavior changing consideration, do so at our own peril, for it is representative of an increasing numbers mirror images of how the world sees us. We can no more ill afford to continue ignoring these images, while avoiding those atonements we need to make for our transgressions they represent, than we can go on ignoring the insults and injuries we commit against the planet. Either or both lead to the same dystopia. A link to the Watson Institute report can be found in the online print version of this broadcast.

Next Gregory Porter, Common, Keyon Harrold and Andrea Pizziconi sing: Running (Refugee Song)

Today I received my seventh phone call from a political campaign volunteer requesting the status of my election ballot. Two of the calls have been from Republicans, one representing the campaign of Alaska House District 5 candidate Kevin McKinley, the other representing the campaign of US Senate candidate Dan Sullivan. Four of the calls have come from campaigners representing the Democratic nominee for US Senate, Dr. Al Gross. One caller represented Democratic nominee Alyse Galvin.

OK I get it. It’s a contentious election, and there’s a lot at stake this election; say health care and reproductive rights, both of which, however, may take their most serious blows this Monday, should the Republicans bring the Orange POTUS’s candidate for the Supreme Court up for confirmation. Police brutality and militarization are considerations as well, but does anyone really believe that, left to their own actions, old “tough on crime Middle Class Joe”, one of those responsible for laws that have disproportionately imprisoned people of color, and his District Attorney running mate Kamala Harris will achieve anything approaching justice in these matters. And then there’s the matter of this nation’s imperial wars of aggression. Not much being said there by the candidates, by any of the so-called electables, ones that you can believe anyway.

Yes do vote. It’s critical, at least in the very immediate. We need to retire the fascist on Pennsylvania Avenue and stop the Alaskan oligarchy theft of our public funds in any case. I have a feeling, though, that in the very near future, the exercise of shoe leather democracy may become more necessary than it has ever before been. On that note, David Rovics sings "The Death Threats and the Lawn Signs"

Last but not least, Bob Marley sings Get Up Stand Up
