Since 2015, the Saudi-led bombing and blockade of Yemen has killed tens of thousands of people and devastated the country. The U.N. calls this the largest humanitarian crisis on Earth. Half the country's people are on the brink of famine, the country has the world's worst cholera outbreak in modern history and now Yemen has one of the very worst Covid death rates in the world: Covid kills 1 in 4 Yemenis it infects.

The disaster in Yemen is man-made, caused by war and blockade. It can be ended. People and organizations ... across the world are coming together to call for an end to the war in Yemen and solidarity with [its] people.

Oxfam is asking you to take a stand TODAY in support of the people of Yemen. Late last year, the Trump administration also informed Congress of plans to sell more precision-guided bombs to Saudi Arabia. These bomb sales have been fueling the conflict for years and have been used to kill hundreds of civilians and destroy hospitals, schools, and other infrastructure. If President-elect Biden does nothing, some of these weapons could be transferred as soon as [this] week."

As Alaskans, we must set a precedent and demand the resignation of [Alaska State] Representative David Eastman, who traveled to Washington D.C. to participate in the event which spawned the insurrection on Jan 6, and Representatives Sarah Vance, Ben Carpenter, George Rauscher, and Senator Lora Reinbold who all used their official position in office and their elevated stature as elected officials to support actions that would overturn the results of the 2020 election.

from Rep. Adam Wool: "...Projected oil revenue for this coming year is the lowest ...since 1979. In other words, both in actual dollars and if we adjust for inflation this is the lowest oil revenue year EVER! Since before the pipeline. This means that we are really no longer an oil state. The majority of our revenue comes from earnings of the permanent fund through the 5% draw of its total value (POMV) that we now use to fund both state services and the dividend."

Rep Don Young in Fbks 456-0210/fax 456-0279; Email via web site: donyoung.house.gov;
Hello this is Rob Mulford, the Asymmetric Moose, with picks for the week of January 24th, 2021:

Last Sunday’s News Miner contained an article titled, “Pentagon aims to spread artificial intelligence across military services.” The piece, largely a public relations schmooze from, the world’s largest purveyor of psychological warfare, the Department of Defense and its complex of industrial and university stakeholders, delivers its punch line in one sentence, saying, “[W]ere the time between conception of a weapon system and its production can take decades, the Tradewind (DoD’s commercial brand name) promises a timeline of months.”

I’m reminded of an Institute for Defense and Government Advancement conference I attended back in 2010 in Arlington, Virginia. There, I and a group of somewhere between 30 and 40 scientists, engineers, and corporate executives from some of the Nation’s most profitable hi-tech weapons systems contractors were briefed on the latest doctrinal changes to US military weapons system research, development, and procurement.

In one of these briefings, a DARPA (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) project manager explained, “Due to the rapidly changing world of high technology, we are getting away from the old system of “Projects of Record” where congress (read the people) approves proposed projects; allocates funds; and supervises performance; to a system where you (meaning the weapons contractors) start developing systems like Apple develops its iPhones. We’ll by the best.

An Air Force Colonel, tasked with leading that service’s nascent drone pilot training program explained that that Service’s scientific and technological future could be found in that year’s annual report from the commander of the Air Force Research Laboratory. Perusing that document, I learned of some of the future plans, including Artificial Intelligence, Particle Beam Weapons, and a myriad of augmentations of the human mind and body in the pursuit of creating the world’s most lethal warfighters. These included AI, brain implants, even genetic modifications on selected unborn.

It has been ten years since I attended these briefings. We have AI. We have the Cloud and the GIG (Global Information Grid) economy; all largely developed by and infused with the same military and intelligence agencies and contractors. Murder and domination have become the driving force of the US economic order.

War remains our ugliest occupation. The following tune is traditional. It has been played for over a century and a half, probably by thousands of string bands and old-timey music enthusiasts; none, I believe, who convey the message of its lyrics more convincingly than the great singer songwriter guitar player extraordinaire, Guy Clark – Soldiers Joy.

Next acoustic blues and reggae artist Dr. Correy Harris – sings of those sent into harm’s way, desperately waiting to come home, and those loved ones...
desperately awaiting them, in Just In Time.

Juneau’s dearly departed and much missed troubadour of tunes of social significance, Buddy Tabor continues this week’s indictment of this most hateful of enterprises, in Isaiah’s Dream.

I saw this next band at Tipitina’s in New Orleans. Their message is spot on. “Give me my acres and give me my mule”. Galactic sings There’s Something Wrong With This Picture.

“I'm scared to bother around her house at night. She got a police dog cravin' for a fight. His name is Rambler, when he gets a chance; He leaves his mark on everybody's pants.” A true musical genius, Etta Baker was born in Caldwell County, North Carolina, of African-American, Native American, and European-American heritage. From the age of three, she played both the 6-string and the 12-string acoustic guitar and the five-string banjo, playing the Piedmont blues for nearly ninety years. I’ll go out with her instrumental version of Blind Blake’s Police Dog Blues

Wage Peace.
